B. PROJECT SUMMARY and STATUS OF INDIVIDUAL GRANTS

The Department of Community & Economic Development administers the Mini Grant Assistance Program with funds from the Denali Commission and the United States Forest Service. The Department awards Mini-Grant Assistance funds for both agencies through an annual competitive application process to local governments, tribal governments and non-profit organizations. The application materials are generally made available in May; applications are due in October; and awards are made in January. We experienced a delay in the awards process in FY 02 due to the quantity of applications received, (approximately 100) and due to problems convening the review committee during December. Awards were announced in February 2002.

As reflected in the FY 01 Mini Grant report, the Department made several changes in the application process for FY 02. First, we did not require applicants to submit resolutions of support from both the City and the Tribal governments, although we encouraged it. Instead, we agreed to accept other evidence of community support and assigned points in the review process based on the strength of the evidence submitted. This seemed to be much more workable for applicants and it provided both the Department and the funding agencies an acceptable level of assurance that those projects with the most community support were brought to the table for funding consideration. We plan to continue this practice with future application cycles.

A second issue which was reconsidered after the FY 01 application cycle was the process of having the applications ranked for priority by the ARDORs. This regional ranking process was developed out of a desire, on the part of both the Department and the funding agencies, to make the funding decisions as close to the regional level as possible. We found however that the mechanics of this process and inconsistencies in the ranking procedures made this process unworkable. With the FY 02 application process, we left all ranking of applications to the official selection and review committee. Again we found this practice to be a better choice.

One change in the FY 03 Mini Grant Program which is under consideration would allow the Department to make Mini Grant awards with recovered or unobligated funds throughout the year as the funds become available. The Department would convene a review and selection committee to evaluate applications as we receive them and we would utilize the same funding criteria as is used during the regular award cycle. Implementing this practice would allow more flexibility in responding to the needs of communities throughout the year. Only "time sensitive" applications would be considered in this proposed manner.

With a total of $644,755,000 in new FY 02 funds available for grants and anticipating some recovered funds from FY 01, 28 applicants were awarded a total of $704,635 in grant funds from the two pots of money. A copy of the awards list is attached.

To date, 12 grants have been executed. The remaining grants are currently in the negotiation stages and we expect to have all executed by June 2002.

The following grants were executed in March 2002:

1.	Kenai Peninsula RC&D for Livestock Feasibility Study	$21,430
